France At Its Best

The highly emotional French welcome for Americans who assisted in celebrating the liberation of Paris has offset the bad impression made by Frenchmen in Normandy who found less joy in liberation than they found glumness in the destruction that went with it.

Due largely to the circumstance that many able correspondents were in Paris for the big occasion, newspaper and radio impressions again depict France at its best—a nation of courageous, sentimental beings whose ready laughter serves as a national trademark.

There has been generated again that kindly feeling which dominated the American attitude toward France in World War I—the feeling which did so much to hasten disillusionment after the war when Americans learned that behind French laughter lay a starkly realistic attitude toward the practical problems which had arisen during the war.

It might be better this time to realize in advance that United States fighting forces are not in France to win a popularity contest, or to judge one, but to defeat another German threat to over-run Europe. The French are a great people and have the history to show for it, but they are no more immune to the ready criticism which is the trademark of the American traveling abroad than the English, Australians, Italians and the Islanders of the South Seas.

All Good Things Must End

Ohio's civilian defense program is threatened with termination by refusal of the state board of control to grant Director Ralph H. Stone's request for $55,000. Director Stone is naturally upset by the prospect that his agency may perish, but the fact is all good things must end sometime—and this may be as good a time as later to terminate this particular activity.

It has performed distinguished service, not in the way that was originally contemplated, because the potential emergency it was organized to deal with never developed, but in other activities important to the war effort. Its thousands of volunteer workers have pitched in on numerous occasions to perform wartime chores that somebody had to do voluntarily.

Civilian defense was distinctly important when popular morale needed reassurance that preparedness measures were under way in case of air raids. Its little contributions to the war effort were legion, and the sum of them will loom large in the recapitulation of the assets that were called on to make the nation's winning war effort possible. But the fact is that for many months civilian defense has been passing out of existence by force of natural circumstances. The time for its demise probably has arrived.

Post-War Military Efficiency

Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, has performed distinguished service with his broad outline of a post-war military organization based on a small nucleus of professional soldiers and a large trained civilian reserve. He could shed more light on this important subject if he were to explain how to train the reservists to the best advantage.

Public thinking in that direction has been sidetracked at the outset by Mrs. Roosevelt's proposal for a type of training in which proficiency in the use of weapons would be incidental to training in the broad aspects of citizenship. This has suggested the possibility that the United States may be rushed headlong into something like the youth training camps in Germany.

Mrs. Roosevelt's proposal would not be worth taking seriously if it did not reflect a school of thought. Gen. Marshall's school seems to be diametrically opposed to it, but the public would welcome an overt expression of expert military opinion at this time. It may be argued that the general should not enter controversy with the First Lady, but it must be argued that unless the public is guided in its thinking, the whole question of post-war military efficiency might become so confused that a deadlock would be the result.

Skirmish Without Casualties

British skirmish in evading Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery to the rank of field marshal as soon as Gen. Bradley of the United States had been given co-equal status in the field has excited some of the combatants in the battle of Washington to a point of frenzy. They are screaming that this gives Montgomery higher rank than Gen. Eisenhower.

One of the most fortunate things about the European war, however, has been the genius of Gen. Eisenhower in minimizing friction between the military hierarchies of the two great armies under his command. Until notice to the contrary is relayed from the fighting front, it may be assumed that the only place where Field Marshal Montgomery's rank is causing real consternation is on the war-scarred battlefront of Washington, where the Anglophobes always can find one more excuse to fight a bloody word-skirmish with the British.

Self-Invited

When Germany is defeated, it will be the fond hope of millions of Europeans that they never again will need to endure another German invasion. They will be assured by the peacemakers, of course, that this has been made impossible by the terms imposed on Germany.

But they will have received no assurance from the Germans. When they broadcast over the radio from Brussels that loss of the capital of Belgium was imminent, one of the speakers had this message for Belgians:

"I know you are eagerly awaiting the British and American forces. Within a short while you will fill the streets of Brussels and shout: 'At last, at long last, they are here, the liberators.' You will acclaim the Allied troops. We National Socialists, however, will face any situation. We shall have means to watch you, for we shall never give up our principles. One day we shall come back."

That was the end of the broadcast.

The Stars Say

Steady and well-organized efforts to achieve uncommonly promising and productive objectives are encouraged by this day's lunar and mutual aspects. It is probable that a unique, novel and ingenious attack of strange openings or propositions may reach a new high in the way of accomplishment. While in such projects the influence and financial assistance of those in standing may be counted upon there may also be many conflicting and menacing circumstances, which may involve change, travel and entirely new and original tactics. In all emergencies be conservative with funds and do not provoke antagonisms.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is have the encouragement of a year of great and enduring achievements in which strange and perplexing problems or propositions arise to tax the ingenuity acumen, and brave attack under opposition, rivalry and probably unique factors. Concentrated efforts, well laid plans and strategies may attract the attention and hearty cooperation of those in high places, and in the long run reach new levels of accomplishment. Work for security, sound foundations and worthwhile triumphs but be conservative with funds and friends.

A child born on this day may have staunch and dependable talents, skills and aims, with ingenuity, intuition and novelty or progressive ways and means of achieving worthwhile objectives even against rivalry and jealousy.

Psychiatric Cases Among Draftees

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

MY MENTOR, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, and I both read with approval the very caustic remarks of Dr. Henry C. Link in the July "American Mercury" on the actions of the psychiatric boards in their wholesale rejection of draftees because of nervous and mental symptoms and their equally wholesale recommendation on the same grounds of discharge after men have been inducted.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Dr. Link is concerned principally in whether these boards are not making mental cases out of large groups of the population and making entirely too many of them think when they return to civil life that they are somehow special and distinctive cases, and that they are just not suited to a rough and workaday world.

The statistical figures are sufficiently shocking. Of 3,835,000 draftees classified as unfit, as of April 19, 1944, 1,340,000, or 35 per cent, were rejected as mentally unfit or deficient. Of these 535,699 were classified as mentally deficient, and 802,000 were rejected for mental disease or some "nervous condition or state of mind."

Mentally Deficient Group

The mentally deficient group do not constitute as much of a problem as the average citizen might at first think. A great deal of the heavy work of the world is done by just this group of citizens. They are the hevers of wood and the drawers of water. They do a routine task very well, and they are perfectly content to stay put once they find something that suits them. They cannot take a job that requires decisions and rapid adjustments, and they are not happy in such a job. But in less responsible, but necessary labor, they are very efficient and remain content and happy. They are not dangerous, as the layman expects "mental" cases to be. They will never lead any revolutions. We could not get on without them. And you see some of them around you every day from the time you start to work until you return home. I am of course not talking about the mental defective of the level of idiosyncrasy or imbecility.

Of the other group a percentage and it must be a small percentage, are actual mental cases—maniac-depressives, paranooids or bad schizophrenics. But most of them must be what are commonly called neurotics, or neurasthenics. Dr. Link feels that the army has been too soft with them. "In the last war," he writes, "shell shock really meant 'hell shock.' Today this term is loosely applied to almost any neuro-psychiatric condition." In short, most of these men are simply scared and are weak enough to admit it, and the army psychiatric boards have them act just like their doting mothers, and make even worse mama-boys out of them than they originally were. Every soldier is scared not only when he gets into combat but when he is first inducted. The men conquer it and do their duty. The mama-boys whine and get left off.

Effect of Examination

Not only is that an injustice, but, as Dr. Link complains, they have a psychiatric examination and hear a lot of the terms of the new psychiatry—such as "complexes," and "libido," and "escape mechanisms," and these they carry back into civil life, and they become confirmed neurotics. One case instanced by Dr. Link was of a woman who hailed from discharged soldier-husband into court for non-support; his defense was that the army doctors had told him he was "emotionally unstable" and "couldn't work."

What Dr. Gibbs and I are concerned about is whether these mama-boys get pensions. There still is enough drizzle in the United States Treasury without that. Any one applying for a pension on psycho-neurotic grounds should be required to have had six months' army duty with 200 hours of combat experience.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. F.: What is the sixth sense of the blind?

A.: According to Dr. Karl M. Dallenbach, Professor of Psychology at Cornell, a blind person becomes aware of an object or a wall or post before he touches it. If his ears are plugged, however, is awareness is lost. Bats in their night flight emit vibrations of 30,000 per second; when a bat's hearing is destroyed it collides with walls if put in a room or cage or obstacle if it is flying in the open.

A. K.: Is there any foundation to the idea that putting salt on grapefruit is a harmful practice?

A.: No. Probably putting salt on grapefruit goes to popularity due to the recent scarcity of sugar, and was adopted by those who like sugar on grapefruit. Salt is harmless on cantaloupe and watermelon also. Excess salt is readily eliminated by the kidneys and any danger applies only to those who have kidney disease.

Lady Nearly Choked While Lying In Bed—Due to Stomach Gas

One lady said a few days ago that she used to be afraid to go to bed at night. She was swollen with stomach gas, which always got worse when she went to bed, and the gas would rise up in her throat after she lay down and would nearly choke her. She couldn't lie flat. Had to prop herself up on pillows. Recently this lady got ERB-HELP and now says gas is gone, stomach feels fine, bowels are regular and she can go to bed and sleep soundly.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-HELP. Lease Drug Stores, State and Lincoln Sts.

Bringing Up Baby In The Right Way

Presented By The Staff of The Child Study Association of America, Inc.

MOST babies suck their fingers at one time or another, some more, some less. There is almost nothing that gives them the same comfort as sucking something. Many older children too, even at three or four of five, suck their thumbs when they are tired or unhappy.

Some Don't's
Don't pull his hand out of his mouth. It will only pop right in again.
Don't try to break him of this by using thumbguards. They rarely do any good.

Don't tell him he is a baby or shame him in front of other children. This will make him really unhappy and less able than ever to give it up.

Some Do's
While he is still a baby, be sure that he gets enough sucking when he takes the breast or the bottle.
See that you are doing everything you can to make him feel contented and secure.
Give him plenty of loving and cuddling.

Give him a favorite doll or cuddly animal to take to bed with him at night.

GOON GUN STRIKES TERROR INTO ENEMY

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The Army's mobile 42-inch mortar, popularly known as the "goon gun," has earned the affection of American soldiers in the war theaters throughout the world, the Army Chemical Warfare Service reports.

In one year, from June 1, 1943, to June 1, 1944, mortar battalions fired 483,000 shells at Axis troops. Total weight of these shells was nearly 6,000 tons and their lethal contents totaled 1,427 tons, of which 587 tons was white phosphorus.

Japanese and German captives attest their dread of the weapon. Lt. Col. James H. Battle, of Concord, N. H., led a unit that plastered the city of Montebourg, France, so effectively that the Germans thought they were under fire from 14-inch naval artillery. Similar reports have come out of the Pacific, Italy and Sicily.

BUZZ BOMBS FEWER OVER LONDON NOW

LONDON, Sept. 6.—As London enjoyed a quiet night—the fifth in a row broken only by one brief flurry of flying bombs early yesterday—the Germans hinted they would turn their "V-1" robots against Allied armies on the continent now that most of the buzz bomb coast has been lost.

Conceding that the flying bombs "may not be launched against England with the same regularity as hitherto, a Nazi radio commentator declared: 'The V-1 can be employed against other targets on the European continent. The weapon will lose nothing of its importance.'

Londoners, while naturally suspicious of the Nazis, are about ready to hail their own "liberation"—the freedom from four years of bombing.

Corn is steamed in husk with thyme, butter or margarine.

BY GAYNOR MADDOX

NEA Staff Writer
Ever tried steamed corn? Strip off much of the outer husk. Remove silk. Then, with sharp knife, cut the cob itself free from the base end of the stem and husks. But do not remove cob from the husks. Tie the remaining husks with string about the cob. Place in heavy kettle with very little boiling water. Cover and steam from 8 to 10 minutes.

Green Peppers With Corn Pudding (Serves 4)

Four green peppers, 2 cups corn, 1/2 cup hot milk, 2 tablespoons butter or fortified margarine, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon sugar, 1/2 teaspoon powdered mace, 2 eggs.

Select medium, regular-sized green peppers; cut off tops and remove seeds. Cover with boiling salted water and parboil 5 minutes. Drain but save the water. Mix corn, with remaining ingredients. Fill the green pepper cups—place in baking dish small enough to hold peppers upright. Fill bottom of dish with water in which peppers were cooked. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 25 minutes until corn custard in the peppers is set, and brown over the top.

Creamed Limas and Corn
Two cups green lima beans, 1/4 cup boiling water, 1/2 teaspoon sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter or fortified margarine, 1 cup corn, cut from cob, 1/2 cup hot milk.

Wash limas; add boiling water, sugar, salt. Simmer together 5 minutes. Add the remaining ingredients and continue cooking until corn is well cooked but not overcooked (about 8 minutes).

EXPECT AMERICAN PRODUCTS TO TOP SOVIET IMPORTS

(By United Press)
WASHINGTON — The United States stands a good chance of becoming the leading selling nation to the Soviet union after the war, according to official trade analysts.

Before the war the United Kingdom led all the countries in purchases of Russian goods while Germany sold the most to the Soviet union. But now it appears that the United States will outstrip all competitors for Soviet trade.

The Soviet union will have a tremendous need for capital goods—oil equipment (from drilling to refining), electrical manufactures, steel, chemicals, railroad equipment, ships and shipbuilding techniques. (Eric Johnston, U. S. Chamber of Commerce president, said that during his recent tour of Russia, officials talked in terms of buying billions of dollars worth of American goods.)

It is known that the Soviet union is interested in obtaining commercial credits in the United States. In addition, Russia has gold stocks and foreign currency for making trade payments.

U. S. May Sell 350 Million
Some sources believe that Soviet exports and imports after the war may total one billion dollars in value, with the United States selling annually as much as 350 million dollars worth of goods.

Before the war, trade between the Soviet union and the United States had reached sizable proportions. U. S. exports to Russia ranged in value from 80 to 100 million dollars a year, while imports from Russia were around 25 to 30 million a year. The United States usually had a favorable trade balance of 4 to 1.

Trade analysts do not view Russia as a strong competitor of the United States and Britain, for example, in world markets after the war, but point out that she will have to sell a considerable amount of goods abroad to pay for imports she vitally needs.

Wide List of Exports
There are scores of commodities which Russia hopes to sell in the United States, but these are the most important: furs (including seal skins), fish, crabmeat, bristles, caustic soda, chemicals, chrome concentrate, tobacco (for blending with domestic types), cow, horse and other small hair (for upholstery), coal, flax, leather (kid and goat), licorice root, lumber, manganese, magnesite, micas, mica, platinum, plywood, pulpwood, rugs, sausage casings and oil seeds.

The possibilities of the Russian market are widely recognized. British manufacturers already are in touch with Soviet representatives. Sweden has indicated her interest in postwar trade with Russia, while the Czechoslovak-Soviet union mutual assistance treaty (December, 1943) calls for "extensive economic co-operation" between the two countries.

Some persons have compared Russia of today with the United States of the 19th century, drawing the analogy from her need to develop inland transport and heavy industry and her plans for encouraging mass production. Trade analysts feel that American goods and services will be an important factor in Russian reconstruction and economic development.

Mild, Unknown Polio Attack May Have Immunized You Against Recurrent Case

BY HENRY LESENE
CHARLOTTE, N. C.—You may have had infantile paralysis or "polio" and never known it; you may have had so many small doses of it that you're immune.

That's how medical science explains, in the light of the little that is known about the baffling disease, the fact that polio usually strikes only children. The children haven't had time to develop immunity. How could one have polio and not know it? The case might be so mild it was hardly noticeable at once diagnosed. You naturally hear only about the severe cases.

Many Are Infected
During epidemics, says Dr. Don W. Gudakunst, medical director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc., many people are infected yet their symptoms are so slight they aren't recognized. They recover promptly completely.

In only a few cases do the symptoms progress and paralysis and muscle weaknesses develop. And in about half of these the disabilities disappear of their own accord, without any special treatment.

Persons with the mild, unrecognized cases are carriers of the polio virus unknowingly. According to Dr. Gudakunst, it has been demonstrated repeatedly in the last few years that seemingly healthy persons can carry the virus without developing any symptoms of illness.

For every patient showing paralysis there may be ten or even 100 or more milder cases with no pa-lithy day celebrations each year.

Half the money raised each year is left in the area in which it was contributed, to finance the Foundation's chapter serving that section. The remainder is used by the national foundation for research, education and epidemic aid. The chapters care for the polio victims in their area and there is a chapter in nearly every county in the United States. In times of epidemics, the national foundation sends emergency funds, technicians, equipment and epidemiologists into the affected areas.

Polio epidemics generally do not sweep the country. The outbreaks usually affect only certain cities, towns or parts of states. The worst epidemic—in 1916 when there were over 27,000 cases—was confined largely to a few states along the Atlantic seaboard.

Dr. Gudakunst cites these facts about polio: no one can fortell exactly just when or where an epidemic will break out; there is no means of prevention or cure, only palliative treatment; no positive knowledge of exactly how the disease is spread.

Research is going on constantly in scores of laboratories, hospitals and universities. Most of the research is supported by the national foundation. While the goal seems a long way off, more has been learned about polio in the last ten years than in the previous hundred.

No one knows as yet how the filterable virus, too small to be seen even under powerful microscopes, enters the human body. Maybe it's breathed or swallowed. Personal contact may be the answer. Maybe food or milk. Flies in epidemic areas have been shown to carry the virus. Mosquitoes have been experimentally infected in laboratories.

The unanswerable questions are endless. In winter where does the invading organism lurk? Why does it appear only in the summer?

A number of epidemiologists, working under grants from the national foundation, are in the stricken North Carolina areas now searching for clues. Here, or in any number of other places, the answer may be found tomorrow or ten years from tomorrow. Or some Ehrlich may come upon a "magic bullet" that will do for polio what salvarsan did for syphilis.

Western Union Receives Praise of Signal Corps

A certificate of appreciation of the U. S. Army Signal Corps has been awarded to the Western Union Telegraph Co. for its "patriotic service to our country in the world-wide conflict." It was announced today by P. A. Presco.

Western Union's speed and cooperation in furnishing critically needed, semi-automatic telegraph operating personnel in Army teleprinter units, establishing the Washington-London Varioplex, supplying ocean cable apparatus and making available trained technicians to serve as Army officers and enlisted personnel, have materially aided the Signal Corps in its gigantic task of furnishing to the United States Army the world's greatest military communications system," the certificate reads.

Buzz-Bomb's End

Taken by the automatic camera on an Allied fighter plane which blasted a German robot bomb in mid-air over England, the pictures above tell a serial story of one buzz-bomb that failed in its mission. Photos show (1) robot bomb in four-mile-a-minute flight, (2) hit, it slows down, starts to spout smoke and flame, (3) black smoke envelopes it as fire spreads; (4) fire reaches explosive warhead. With terrific blast, bomb bursts—harmlessly.

The man who wears it is one of over one hundred fifty thousand patriotic soldiers of industry who are helping to win the war in an industry which works twenty-four hours a day, three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, to guard America's health by protecting its perishable food supply against attack from bacteria, mould, decay and spoilage.

This vital army of civilian workers, operating nearly six thousand five hundred Ice manufacturing plants strategically located in each of our forty-eight States, constitutes a "battle line" in the strictest sense of the word. They are fighting a battle for health and nutrition to bring fresh, vitamin-laden food to our armed forces, war workers and civilian population. The Ice Industry, dedicated to this vital task, produced over forty million tons of Ice during the past year! A Modern Record!

sands of refrigerator cars, packed to capacity with fresh meat, fish, fowl, eggs, fruit and vegetables for our fighting men in training and overseas, are on the move day and night. Millions of tons of Ice are required to protect this vital food supply all the way from the producers to the Army and Navy Cantinments, training centers, and ports. This service must not fail—the loss in vital foods would be staggering and the health of our soldiers and sailors at home and abroad would be seriously endangered.

depends upon an adequate and continuous supply of Ice to protect their food from spoilage. Despite unprecedented military demands and wartime shortages of manpower, materials and equipment, the Ice Industry delivered over twenty billion pounds of Ice into these homes during 1943. Ice refrigeration is equally important to the 665,000 food stores, meat and fish markets, restaurants, hotels and hospitals, and other essential commercial establishments which are supplied with over twelve million tons of Ice annually.

Nothing contributes more to the day-by-day morale of our fighting men in training, of defense workers and civilians, than fresh, wholesome, vitamin-laden food and the relaxation and refreshment of an ice-cold drink—both made possible by the nation-wide, round-the-clock service of your local Ice service man and the Ice Industry.

Along with its vital war activities, the Ice Industry is continuing its leadership in the Refrigeration Industry by constantly maintained research and post-war planning. After Victory comes we will be ready with many interesting innovations in product and service—as well as refrigerators of entirely new design, so that you can enjoy even better refrigeration than ever before. Sweden to Bar Doors to Escaping War Criminals town in Ohio, came here from Cleveland where a three week's campaign was successfully concluded.

WAR WORKERS

On Critical List

Jobs are available to all persons over the age of 16, regardless of previous training, experience and employment. There are many opportunities, the recruiting leaders point out, for physically handicapped persons and for older people who are able to do only work of simple operation.

The Mullins plant in the city needs 425 workers, over half of which can be women, while the Keener Foods plant, operating exclusively for the government, will begin work within a few weeks, requiring another several hundred employees. Both plants are listed as critical by the WMC because of the urgent need for the products of the first and because the food which must be processed in the latter plant must be handled as it becomes available.

The dehydrating plant, total output of which will go to the government, will be in operation for a limited time, its first work to be done with the apple crop expected to mature shortly. Part-time workers, housewives and any others with short periods of leisure time, will be urgently needed. The work will be uncomplicated and not difficult. Persons desiring to volunteer should communicate with the U. S. Employment service if they are not contacted through the recruiting drive.

ECZEMA

A simple way to quick relief from the itching of Eczema, pimples, angry red blotches and other skin irritations is by applying Peterson's Ointment to the affected parts. Relieves itching promptly. Makes the skin look better, feel better. Peterson's Ointment also soothing for tired, itchy feet and cracks between toes. 35c. all drugists. Money back if not delighted.

challenge to Turkey's control of the famous Dardanelles strait—the brightest jewel in the Ottoman crown.

The semi-official Moscow newspaper pravda more than once recently has charged that Turkey was continuing relations with Germany under neutrality. This has been widely interpreted among observers as spade-work for Russian insistence on having unrestricted access to the Mediterranean from the Black sea via the strait.

Anyone who has sailed through this great channel, as I have, cannot fail to have been impressed with its importance to the Muslim world. Without access to it, we are cut off from the Mediterranean by water; with access they can move not only their merchant shipping but their Black sea naval fleet which in days to come may be very powerful.

Moscow's vast interest in the Dardanelles has been multiplied by the course of the war, from which she seems to be emerging as the dominant power of the eastern hemisphere. By the same token, the interest of other powers is intensified. This is especially true of England, which for generations has been mistress of the Mediterranean.

Thus the control of the Dardanelles—strategically one of the most important spots in the world—becomes one of the great problems for the post-war sages. It may even prove to be one of the most delicate. Time will tell.

Has Turkey missed the bus by clinging too long and not too wisely to neutrality? British Prime Minister Churchill last May said that "the course which is being taken and has been taken so far by Turkey will not, in my view, procure for the Turks the strong position at the peace which would attend their joining the Allies."
